

The New Yahoo! Search

Getting you from "to do" to "done" in one search

Introducing Yahoo! Search Assist.

Find exactly what you're looking for quickly and effortlessly.

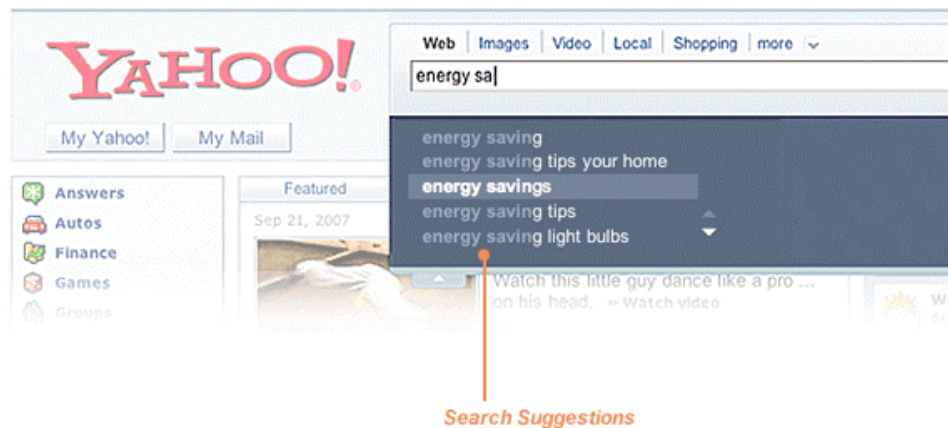

Knowing what you want is one thing. Knowing exactly the right words for it is another. That's where the new Yahoo! Search Assist comes in. When you go to Yahoo! and search, it's not like search on other Web sites. It's like you're asking your friend. A smart friend, that is. Someone who knows where to find answers to everything under the sun.

As you type, it automatically offers search terms and phrases in real time. After you've searched, it suggests additional search terms to try as well as new topics to consider.

It saves time. By offering great suggestions, often exactly what you had in mind, it reduces the need to complete your search or enter repetitive searches.

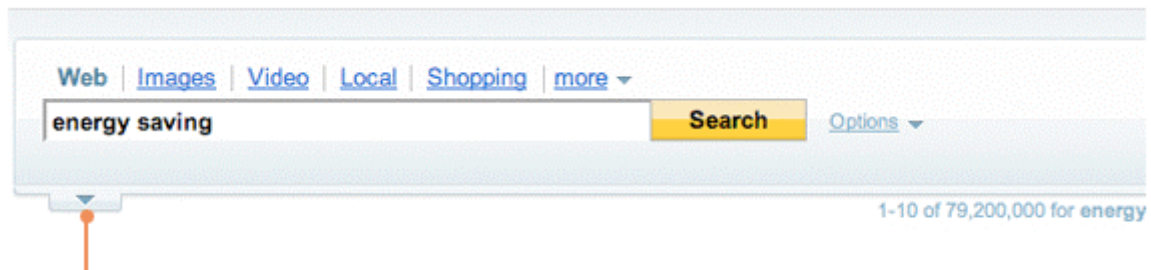

It's smart. By making suggestions as you type, it eliminates one of the hardest parts of searching — coming up with the right query.

It gives you ideas. By suggesting additional search terms and topics related to what you type, it triggers ideas you hadn't thought of to help you zero in on what you're looking for or further explore a topic.

Explore related concepts

After you type in your search, you'll see your search results page. If you'd like to further your search, you don't need to type in the search box again – just click on the blue arrow below the search box. Yahoo! Search Assist shows your suggestions again, plus ways to expand your search with related concepts.

The New Yahoo! Search

Getting you from "to do" to "done" in one search

For example, when you search for "energy savings", your related concepts include "energy use" and "energy star". If you mouse over "energy star" and click on it, you get refreshed search results below. If you follow the links, you'll learn about saving energy and saving money. And that's not all. Whenever you type in the search box, if you type slowly, Yahoo! Search Assist senses your hesitation and offers you suggestions right away. To scroll through them, mouse over the arrows inside the box and click, or use the arrow keys on your keyboard.

The screenshot shows the Yahoo! Search interface with the search box containing "energy savings". Below the search box, there are two columns of suggestions. The left column, labeled "Search Suggestions", includes items like "energy citations database", "monster energy drink", "monster java energy drink", "energy drinks", and "energy star qualified". The right column, labeled "Related concepts", includes "energy star", "saving energy", "energy efficiency", "energy efficient", "energy saving tips", "department of energy", "energy use", and "thermostats". Below the suggestions, the first search result is "1. Energy Savings" with a description: "energy saving links for the residential, manufacturing, commercial, and transportation sectors including government programs ... Energy Savings saving energy in ...".
